William J. Miller Prize in Competition Law

INTRODUCTION

This prize was generously created thanks to the family, colleagues and friends of William J. (Bill) Miller, who passed away suddenly in November, 2013. Bill was a frequent guest lecturer in Competition Law, sharing his wealth of experiences and knowledge from over 20 years practicing criminal and civil competition law at the Department of Justice. Bill had a passion for competition law and was a voracious reader and collector of legal literature, selected by him from book stores visited on his travels around the globe, from Australia (where he did a professional exchange) to Washington and New York (where he often attended conferences and meetings with counsel or witnesses on competition law cases). Bill was born in Britain, and brought back many books from the U.K. on common law trends or the lives of great jurists. The prize seeks to recognize Bill's contribution to scholarship at the University of Ottawa, as well as to share his personal library of books through the donation of a book from his collection as part of the annual prize.
